

With a desire and heart that would really burn in he,
Now came a castle with many a fair made;
As he looked around and sheathed his blade,
There was but one amongst the few,
Whose eyes where and who's heart was true.

He took her hand and knelt on one knew,
And he asked if she would marry he;
Now such as adventurous and wild life he's led,
And she kissed his lips and said she's wed.

Now the story has a happy end,
With the knight and damsel his new found friend;
As they fade from sight on the distant horizon,
Then sinks down and will surely rise again.
