

Parsifal was a Wagner reproduction on stage.
In fact there is many plays on the stage;
Where lights and props are entertaining,
And actors are at home with their leading lady.

In fact drama is creativity of the classical kind,
Where the cast and crew are depicting a story of life anew;
Where reality is a replica of what is unreal,
And people are happy and dreaming with sex appeal.

Each one plays their part in the reproduction,
To lead and portray a character and their depiction;
Personalities lead what the audience desires,
And God gets the glory and the curtain comes down.

The beauty is in the message and meaning,
That the play desires to put across in the theatre to see;
Then we all consume the nature of the day,
As we understand the difference between life and the stage.

With sets and props and scenery,
With extras and the leading characters,
From the crowd standing behind,
To the story and the songs that the lead characters sing.

Now as the stage curtain comes down for the finale,
The actors take a bow and flowers for the leading lady;
The whole cast takes the stage and the encore arrives.
For the parting final parting curtain of days gone by.

Signed,

You can bring the curtain down.