

Left and right are a gift of life to write,

Sometimes clumsy and awkward and not perfect in sight;

We all have to learn to know the difference between them,

For they are the meaning and the interest for being happy then.

.

Like the side and the size of growing up through school,

And then learning to work or go to university or shop;

Whether your Arabic or Asian when language is English or British,

If your accustomed to have everything you need to be written.

.

When you put your shoes and socks on which one comes first,

Does it make any difference to change or is one always the worst;

The thing is we just do it and it does not matter at all,

If right and left shoe is a different size because your tall or your small.

.

As the older is the elder if the young is the leader of letter,

She will lead her if he lets him and that makes things better;

Because faith was victorious and the city worth the looking,

If you're sitting at a desk on one or able to make a booking.

.

Now if your heart is for poetry and people are in their prime,

Or if the fridge turns on and off and electricity is a crime;

For the power of the knowledge is both public and or private,

Which creates a decision for our own personal taste and climate.

.

So when you corner the world and things are left and right,

You can put down your pen and wish people a good night;

For all the money you chase just goes up in somebody's smoke,

And she is a good woman and he's just a good bloke.

.

Signed,

Not Quite Happy.