Life's quite tough without enough, Years that appear when time treats you rough; Just as we strive to retire well off, And celebrate Christmas without a cold or a cough.

Age is realising the stages we reach, In eras that pass like the tide on a beach; In all we behold, seems just but an inch, When people are nice, then life seems a synch.

We hope to become all that we can, And address every nation and win every man; For age creeps upon us as it always has done, So endeavour in love and remember the one.

What now must I do for my dreams to come true, As age creeps upon me and gives me my due; I believe in a God who I know will come through, So I'll trust and obey till the times are anew.

Signed,

I'm thirty four